Patna, established in 1802 by William Fullarton, lies between Carrick and Kyle in East Ayrshire. Named after Patna in India, a nod to Fullarton's father's ties to the British East India Company, the village sits southeast of Ayr along the A713, near Dalmellington. It features a primary school, health centre, library, shops, and scenic riverside spots along the River Doon, celebrated by Robert Burns.

Well-connected by road and rail, Patna is just 15 minutes from Ayr and 30 minutes from Prestwick Airport. Nearby attractions include Culzean Castle, Burns Cottage, the Scottish Industrial Railway Centre, and the Scottish Dark Sky Observatory. Outdoor enthusiasts enjoy Loch Doon, coastal beaches, and numerous golf courses. With two bridges, the "ol brig" and "new brig" spanning the Doon, Patna offers a peaceful base for exploring Ayrshire's history and landscapes.
